JACQUES COUSTEAU

J. Cousteau (1910-1997)

[1] Jacques Cousteau was an ecologist, explorer and filmmaker who spent his whole life underwater investigating sea life. He was born in France in 1910. He was a sickly child and spent much of his time in bed, reading and dreaming about life at sea.

[2] In 1920, his family moved to America, where Cousteau had the opportunity to take up swimming to build up his muscles. His first fascination with water started there. He became more passionate about the mysteries of nature and his career in underwater exploration came about by accident!

[3] After joining the French Navy and travelling around the world, he was involved in a serious car accident that left him badly injured with two broken arms. The doctors recommended that he should practise swimming to make his weak arms stronger. Cousteau again rediscovered his love for the ocean. Shortly afterwards, he invented a pair of underwater breathing equipment that allows people to stay underwater for longer periods.

[4] During World War II, Cousteau worked for the French Resistance and experimented with underwater photography. He helped to get rid of the German mines and was awarded the 'Croix de Guerre' and the 'Legion d'Honneur' medals for his bravery. In 1942, he made his first underwater film "Sixty Feet Down". Later, he bought a ship which he named The Calypso and continued to make documentary films about sea life. He also wrote a book entitled "The Silent World" which became a best seller and was the subject of his next film. The movie received the 'Palme d'Or' at Cannes Film Festival and won an Academy Award.

[5] Cousteau promoted the conservation of the oceans and warned against the dangers of pollution, overfishing, and the destruction of the sea coast. He established the Cousteau Society in 1974 in order to protect ocean life. He discovered new species and raised sunken ships and even led an expedition to Antarctica. Cousteau died in Paris at the age of eighty seven and will always be remembered as one of the greatest sea explorers.
